Minish 2012 Saddle & Sirloin Portrait Gallery Inductee

Gary Minish is the 2012 Saddle & Sirloin Portrait Gallery inductee. The gallery serves as the livestock industry's hall of fame. For those involved in animal agriculture, this selection is one of the highest honors one can receive. It is bestowed by the Saddle & Sirloin award committee based on the recipient's service to and effect on the industry.

Minish began his teaching career in 1962 at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, where he was ultimately named animal and poultry sciences department head in 1994. During his 40 years of service, he has been a teacher, an intercollegiate livestock judging team coach, a student mentor and an Extension specialist.

He served as dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences at Southern Illinois University from 2004 until his retirement in 2010. He is the recipient of numerous agriculture education and industry awards and widely recognized for his improvements to academic programs for animal science and agriculture. Today, Minish and his wife, Roberta, live in Plano, Texas.

During his career, Minish contributed significantly to the livestock industry in the U.S. and abroad, as well as to higher education at every level. Early in his career, he recognized the need for leaner, more heavily muscled and faster-growing cattle. He set out to educate the industry on the benefits of changing from the smaller, fatter cattle of the 1950s and 1960s. He wrote and spoke extensively on the subject, including co-authoring a textbook about beef production and management that supports the type change.

Because of his expertise and passion, he became one of the most sought after beef cattle show judges in the 1970s and 1980s. He officiated at national shows for 10 breeds of cattle in more than 30 states and in Argentina, Australia, Brazil, Canada, England, Scotland and Uruguay. He judged at nearly every leading American show including the International Livestock Exposition in Chicago, the National Western in Denver and the North American International Livestock Exposition in Louisville, Ky.

The Minish family was a longtime breeder and exhibitor of champion Hereford cattle throughout the U.S. During his youth, Minish exhibited the champion steer at the Chicago International, a Hereford he called "The Real McCoy," and the grand champion steer at the American Royal in Kansas City, also a Hereford. HW
